

SOCIAL WORKERS

Dallas, Texas

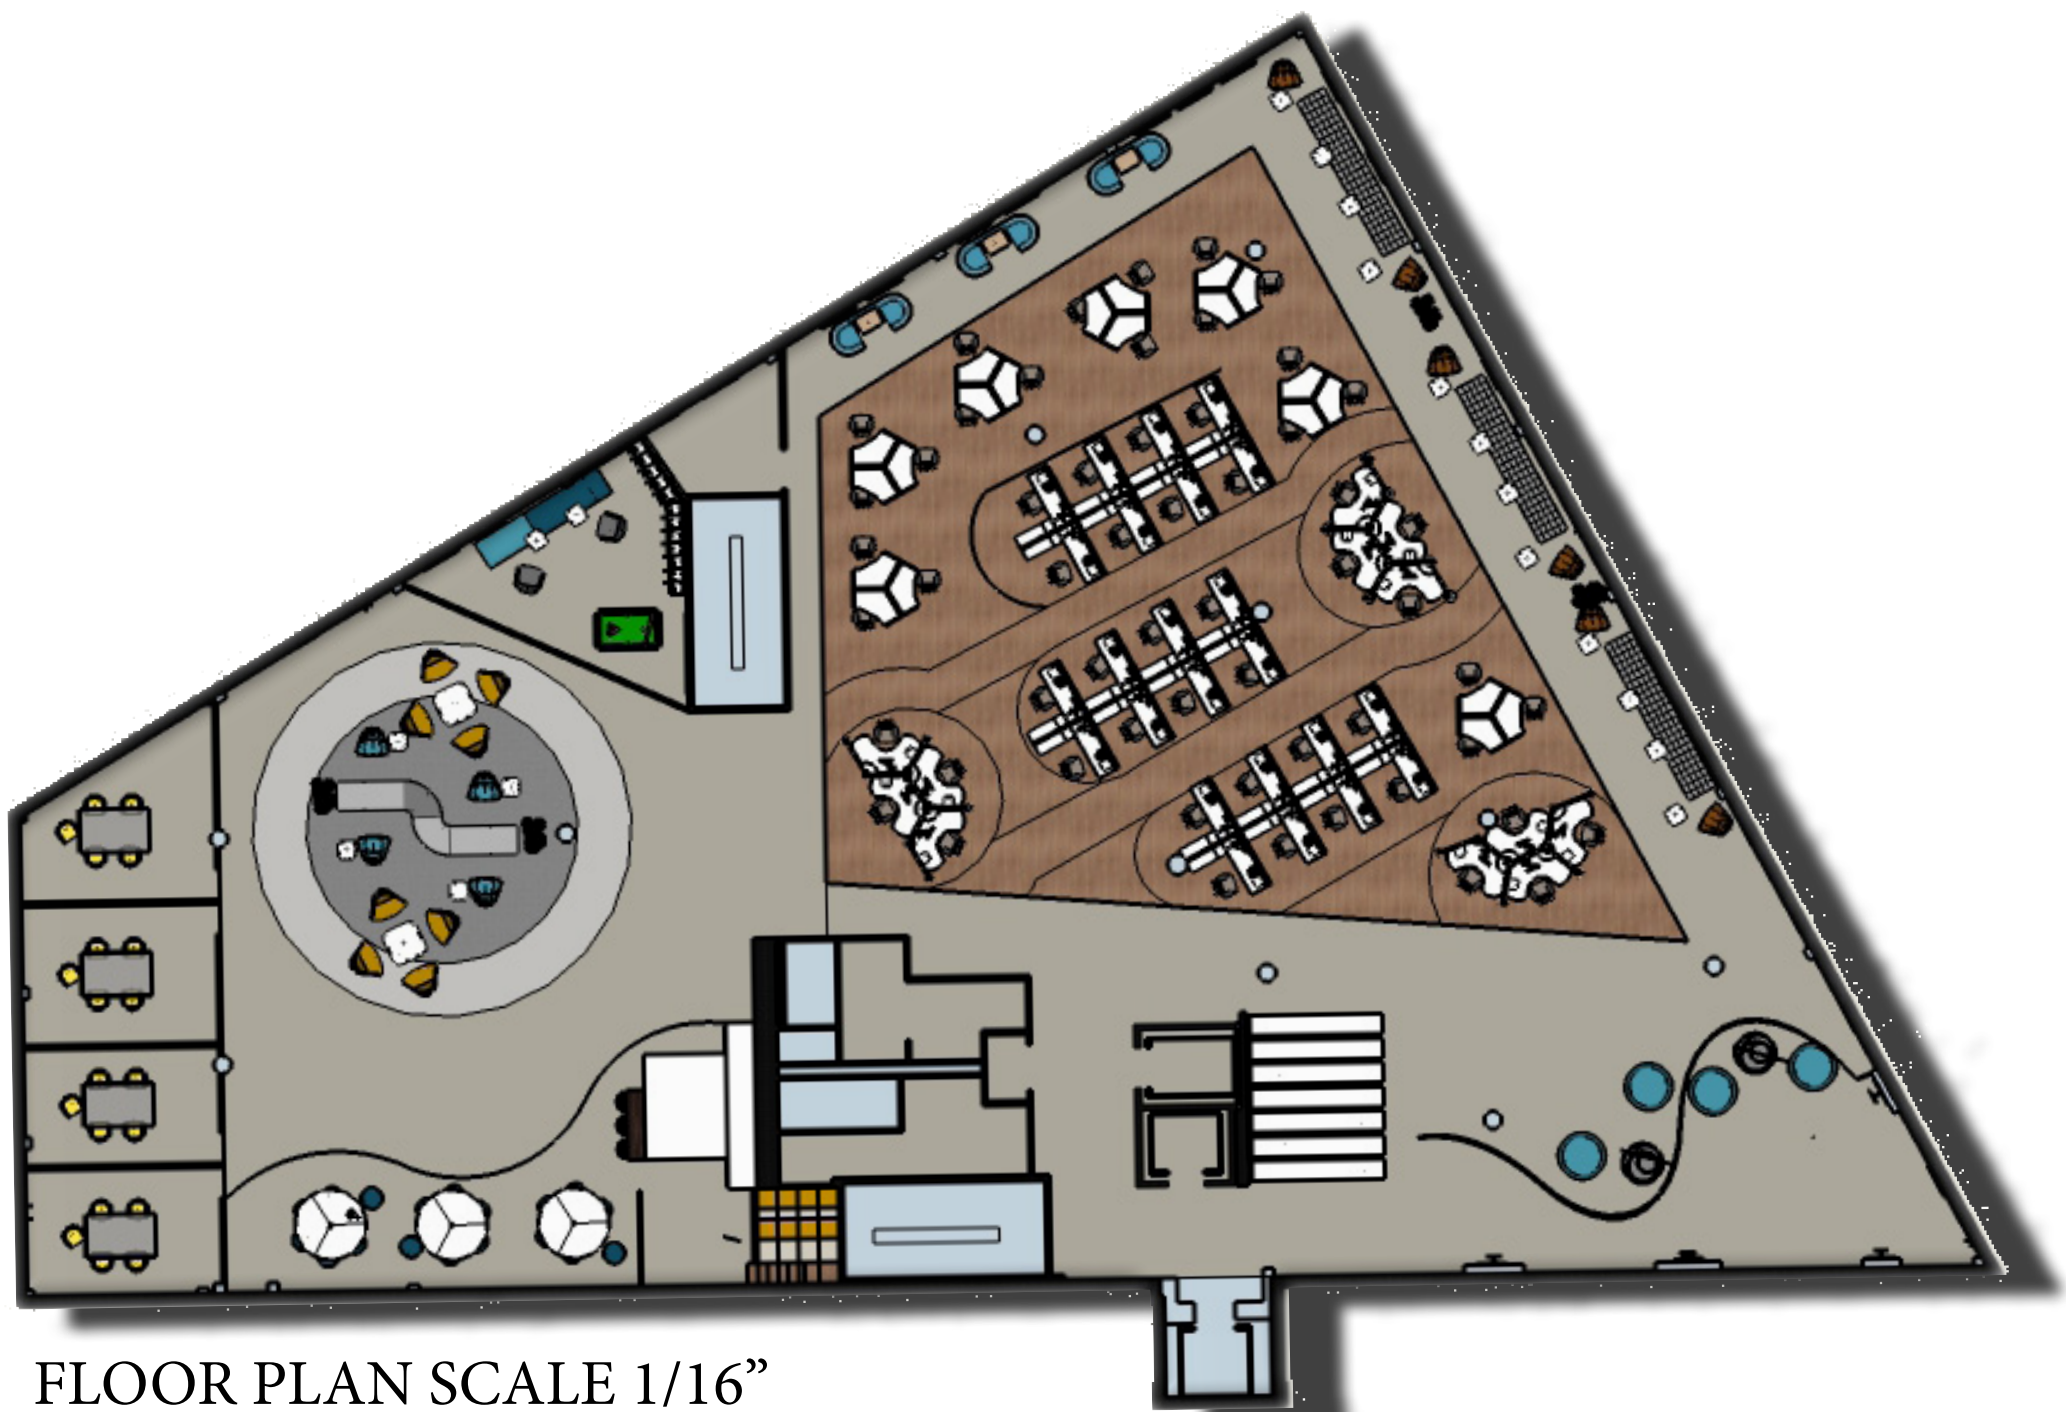

Each day, Social Station will need to transform into an event/retail space that will effectively display the co-working tenants' retail products. Social Station will function in such a way that it will be able to accommodate a large variety of retailers, from sellers focusing on children's clothes to essential oils, and much more. I encouraged to investigate the balance between how the space will operate during the day compared with the demands of the space at night and what aspects will be important to both the retail occupants as well as the consumers visiting the space to shop.

The space required flexible workspace, collaborative workspaces/meeting spaces, lounge space, storage, Small prep-kitchen, private touch-down spaces, heads-down workspaces, workshop, Evening Retail / Event Program include serve food and beverages buffet style.

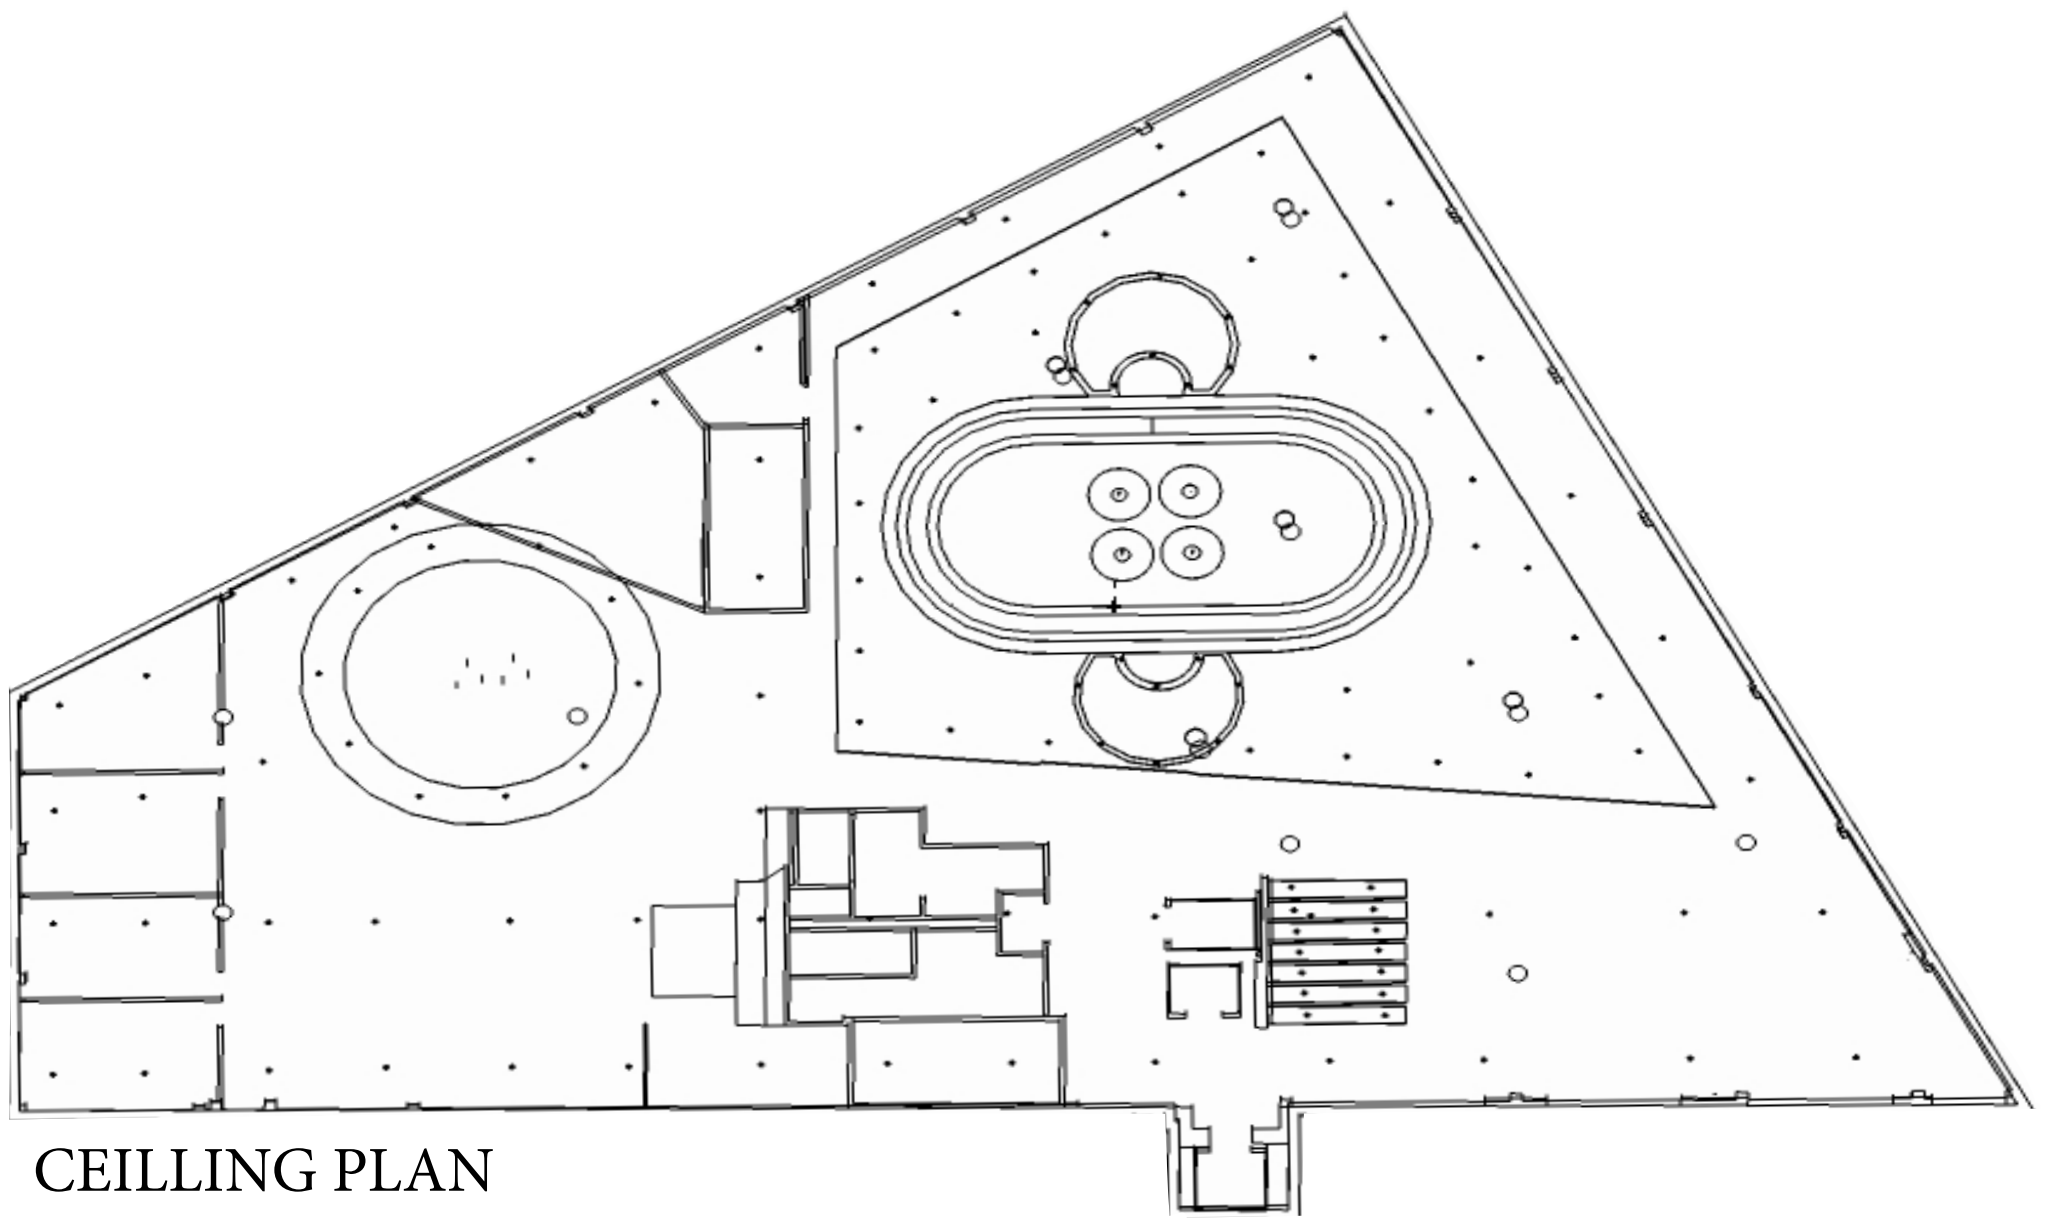

Concept

The concept behind my design adopts generating power between workers. Connecting between transparent and magnet by keeping up with their own theme. The space talks about the important magnet and involve magnet in creating beautiful and practical design. I thought it would be nice to use what they are advertising in the actual design. It's a simple minimalist design because we want make use of space for different purpose. Therefore, I think that having a lot of barriers wouldn't help the company utilizes the space to meet its needs. Transparency delivers a good purpose into this project, with allows the interior space to look and feel easy and clear. Even though there is privacy, the employees still sharing the space and mentaned. The concept of transparency influences the employees and visitors to have a good and pure interior environment, and most importantly, make the space open which help customers walk through the space and be able to see as many stuff as they can.

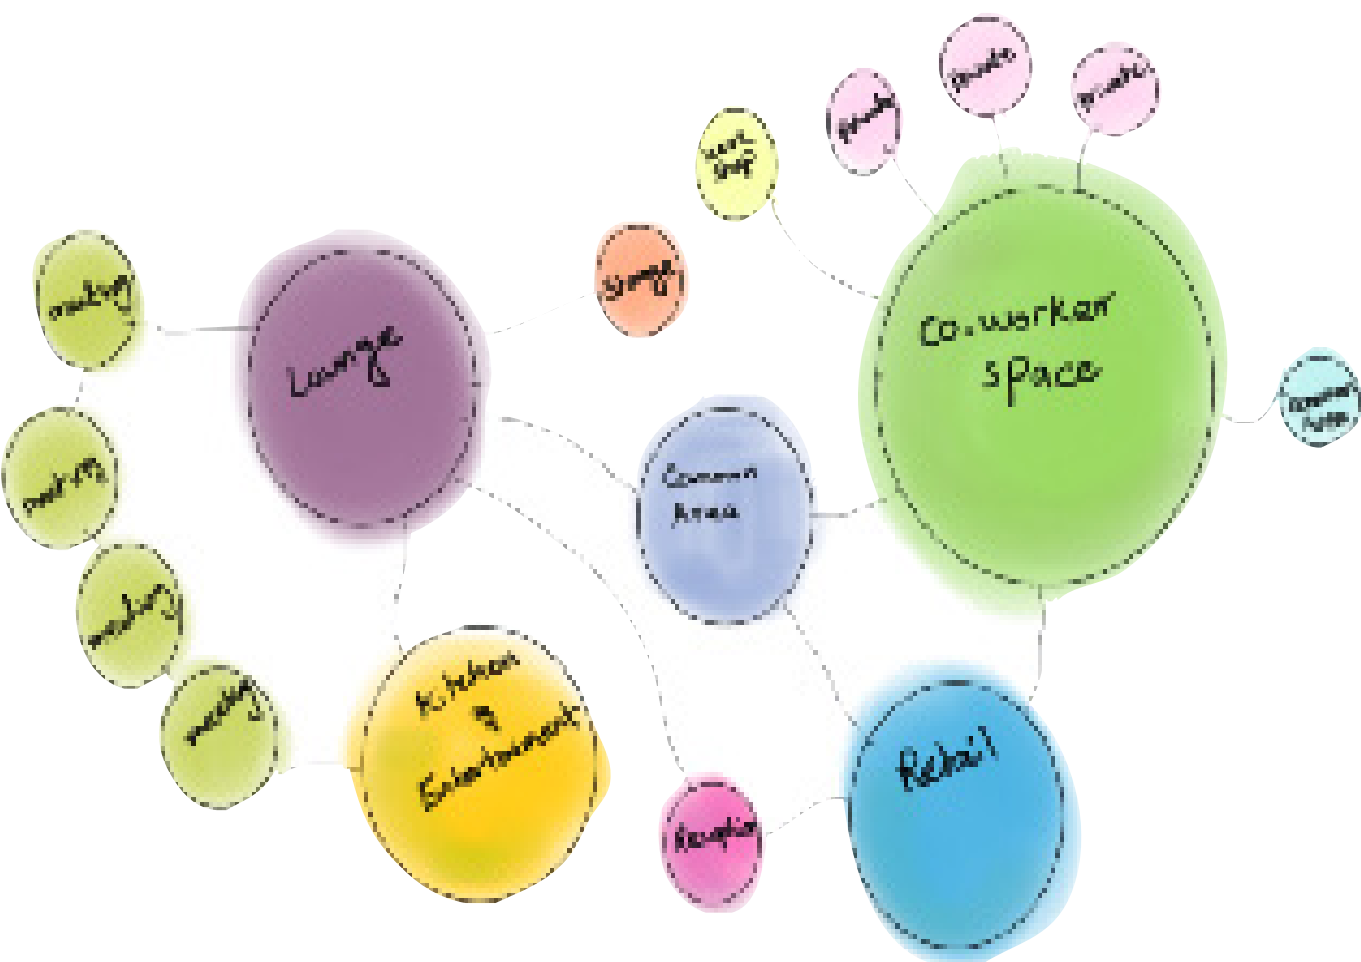

On the other hand, the color scheme plays a huge role to the atmosphere of the interior space in many ways. It's not the secret that the psychological facts of the colors assure that the colors chosen in a work space result to control the mood of the employer. The faded yellow shades and light grays with few touches of blue and white further the idea of clarity. These specific colors were applied into this interior design because they indeed are full of great meanings that lead to motivation and encouragement. For instance, yellow and white colors enhance concentration and refresh the mind, they mean peace, purity,
